Hazardous Weather

A cold front will bring cooler temperatures to the area today with highs generally in the 50s. There will be a chance for rain for most locations with the highest rain chances south of I-20.

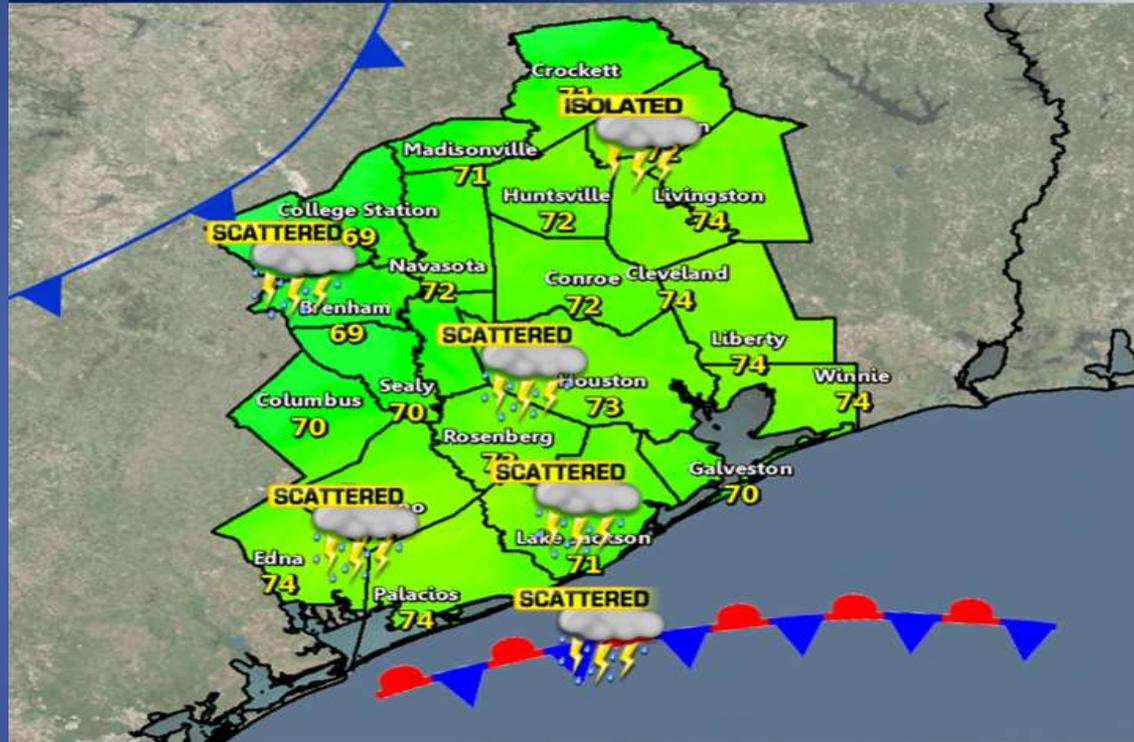

A weak cold front will bring a chance of showers for some and cooler weather to all of the area today. Rain chances will be across the southern half of the region, and precipitation will taper off this afternoon as drier air moves in. High temperatures will range from the mid 60s across the east to the upper 50s across the southwest. Winds will be northerly around 10 MPH behind the front.
