Hazardous Weather

More rounds of squally weather will be expected today thanks to moisture in association with Tropical Storm Fernand as it approaches and makes landfall on the northern Mexico coastline. Showers and thunderstorms will result in locally heavy rain, gusty winds and isolated pockets of minor flooding. Temperatures will otherwise remain in the 80s for most thanks to the area rain and cloud cover.

More hot temperatures are expected today with highs in the 90s to around 100 and afternoon heat index values from the upper 90s to near 107. Some showers and thunderstorms are possible in the southwestern part of the forecast area as moisture from Fernand moves in.
